Two Splendid Wearing and Beautiful Styles in Floor Coverings

Anglo-Persian Herati Wilton

The Anglo-Persian rivals the Oriental Rug for beauty and wear, and is the finest rug made by machinery. Made of hard lustrous worsted, firmly woven, with deep pile and hand sewn, it lies flat and smooth on the floor and makes a beautiful as well as durable floor covering.

Our fall stock contains a large range of new patterns—beautiful reproductions scarcely distinguishable from the originals.

A few of the patterns include:

Ispaham, with Jasper or two-tone background combined with rose, gold, dark blue, light green and tan.

Sumak, a very handsome rug with border of dark blue, rose, green and tan.

Mahal pattern, in gold, mulberry, black and tan.

Antique Silk Prayer Rugs, copies of the Prayer Rugs of the Moslem, whose prayer rug was his most precious possession and on which he expended all the skill of the oriental rug makers.

The coloring in these rugs are exquisite.

French Arabuson Tapestry pattern which is both unusual and beautiful.

Sarouk Pattern in rose, tan, green—a most durable rug.

Chinese Patterns in wonderful colors and designs that are characteristic of the country. These rugs are extremely popular.

Cabistan, shown in rich dark colorings suitable for library or den.

Kermanshah, one of the most beautiful of all Oriental rugs; many bordered in fine design.

Ispaham, with natural camel hair coloring in background.

New
Millinery
With a
Rich
Simplicity

Quite new and smart are the Hats of Duvelyn that are quite appropriate to be worn with suits and street frocks. Soft neutral shades relieved by a touch of color, perhaps, or trimmed with self-folds and a buckle.

Beaver and Pannet Velvet Hats, with trimmings of ostrich, heavy cords, sufficiently smart to be worn any hour of the day.

Tam o' Shanter effects, simply trimmed, are finding much favor, and Feather Turbans, with their richly shaded colors, are extremely good for early autumn wear.

Ultra Smart Top Coats

With Rich Linings

Here are handsome Coats of Lambskin, Evora, Velour, and Bolivia, and other luxurious materials, in the newer colors, many effectively trimmed with fur. The linings are of rich silks in stripes and figure designs and satins. Many styles to choose from.

You Will Be Much Pleased

With the New Waists

A great many models are embroidered, others are beaded or braided. Bound necks are greatly liked for their youthful effect, and many new little touches and graces are seen. Delicate flesh and white and the new colors in all their varying shades.

The Separate Skirt

Is Gay With Autumn Tints

Such colors were made for autumn days—golden browns mingle with darker browns or navy blue—warm, red shades harmonize with blue or brown, or all lend themselves to the making of a wonderful Roman effect. Silk and Wool Skirts both show rich colors. Kilted are most popular, in plaid effects and in plain colors. Velvet, Satin and Tricolette are developed into handsome skirts.

Frocks for Every Occasion

Charmingly New Models

Here are Frocks of Jersey, Serge, Satin, Tricolette, and Velvet—featuring apron panel effects; wing and side tunics; the new bell sleeve, and wonderful embroideries in silk, beads, and metal threads.

All the new colors are included in a widely varied selection.

Handsome Suits

Of Wonderfully Lovely Materials

Distinctive models with collars of handsome fur, or handsome suits without fur trimming that are exceedingly handsome worn with fur sets. Silvertone, Lambskin Duvel de laine, and other exquisite materials beautifully tailored.

This is a season when a woman owes it to her associates to radiate an atmosphere of high faith and optimism, and owes to herself the choice of clothes which induces such a mood. We have spent months in assembling these distinctive wartime wardrobes, selected when fine fabrics were still to be had and from sources distinguished for their authoritative designs.

Jersey and Tricolette
Frocks for MissesIn Particularly Noteworthy
Styles and Newest Shades

These are well made Frocks of two of the season's most popular fabrics, in delightfully smart models—Dresses that young women will like for street and day wear.

JERSEY DRESSES

No matter what style you are looking for, whether you want a striking model or a conservative style for business, whether you want a stunning shade or a subdued one, you will find just the one you are looking for in our large collection. Braiding is exceedingly popular on Jersey Dresses—soutache braid, tailor's braid, and fine silk braid. All the shades of taupe are represented—blues, Burgundy, and gray.

TRICOLETTE DRESSES

That are quite the newest thing as to material. Resembling jersey in weave it lends itself to draping most admirably. They are smart, simple, and withal beautiful, and the young miss who puts on her tricolette frock goes about her business, whatever it may be, war-work, shopping, or the matinee, feeling well dressed, indeed.

The Fourth Liberty Loan gives everybody a chance to be a soldier in the service of Democracy.

With millions of our boys ready to make the Supreme Sacrifice, no one with a spark of sincere loyalty in his heart will deny the overpowering duty of buying bonds to the very limit of his purse strings.

A Little Chat
About "Khaki"

Khaki is a color and not a fabric or weave, so when you ask for "navy blue khaki" you are making a little slip—that's all. Khaki is an Hindustani word meaning, literally, earth colored, and its use is said to have originated about 1848 with the GUIDES, a British command of frontier troops in South Africa, who realized that their white uniforms made them conspicuous targets for enemy fire, so they seized upon the idea of daubing their clothes with mud, and found that the color thus produced made them most inconspicuous, and afforded a protection so valuable that the earth-colored cloth was gradually adopted for use by the British army. During the South African war, 1899-1902, drill of a sandy brown was worn by all troops sent out by Great Britain and her colonies.

During the Spanish-American war, 1898, khaki-colored uniforms were adopted by the United States for field and colonial service, and the color has gradually been almost universally used for service, so when we speak of "our men in khaki" it is not the cloth, but the color to which we refer—for "khaki" may be of woolen or cotton. We are showing a particularly flowing capes. Another piece is a new shade of golden brown. Duvelyn is 54 inches wide, which means that it cuts to splendid advantage.

Wool Velour, Duvel de Laine, Silvertone, and Velours de Laine are other popular fabrics much in demand for making top coats, capes, and suits, and they are shown in all the shades of the moment. Anne Rittenhouse, the noted fashion authority, wrote recently of Velours de Laine, "It is an accepted fabric for winter—as soft as kitten's fur—and weavers tell us that they have perfected the weave." A brown Silvertone, with its tracery of fine threads, would make up into a smart tailored suit, with a bit of Hudson seal used for the collar and cuffs, and a jaunty toque of seal a-top it all; but be sure that a nosegay nestles into the soft fur of the toque. Wouldn't a gardenia be just the thing?

Navy or Black
Net Dinner Gowns

Are being used much by women who consider the cost in these war times. Sometimes the net is quite plain, again it is dotted in large or small dots, or figured until it is really almost a sure-enough lace.

A gown of navy point d'esprit had its bodice heavily braided in very narrow silk braid, and a note of color given by the deep girdle of that popular blue which is sometimes called "Overseas Blue." The effect of the clear, bright blue peeping from the folds of the darker blue net was extremely chic.

The gowns of black net show great variety. One is combined with a cobweb lace, and made over a flesh-colored slip, with its broad satin girdle finished with deep jet fringe. Another is smartly combined with much black satin, and just a touch of the "Overseas Blue."

Tiny black fringe finishes the edges of another gown, which is quite as attractive as one with very narrow double ruffles of the net used for a finish. None of these net gowns are expensive for the prices.

Dancing Frocks
Of Chiffon

Are much liked, especially by the younger women. One of orchid color was made of layer upon layer of chiffon over a soft silk foundation slip, and the girdle was of the orchid chiffon laid over a vivid turquoise blue. The effect was indescribably "Frenchy" and was enhanced by the addition of a cluster of pink posies tucked into the belt.

Other chiffon frocks were in several shades, yellow, apricot, and turquoise, while one of the plain color seemed just made for a tall, dark-eyed young girl to look more beautiful in. Of the popular henna was another frock, to which a smart note was added by a girdle and long sash of French blue. There is a note of youthful charm and simplicity in all of these frocks, which bids much for the happiness of the winter dances hereabouts.

Duvelyn
For Top Coats

So many women are having their top coats and suits made that they will want to see the newest heavy woolen materials here. First there is Duvelyn, that irresistible combination of wool and silk that makes the handsome coats and capes. It is soft and pliable, yet strong and firm in weave, with splendid wearing qualities. One piece in Reindeer (a soft shade between taupe and brown and gray) has its inner side of the softest dull blue, so that it would need no lining if used for making one of the
